Kara Lynn Joyce is a three-time USA Olympic swimmer and motivational speaker currently living in Atlanta, GA. Kara competed in the 2004, 2008 and 2012 Olympics for Team USA. In 2010, Kara took a chance and moved to Denver, CO to train with Olympic star, Missy Franklin, in an attempt to make her third Olympic Team. Her journey has been captured in the beautiful film, "Touch the Wall" and continues to inspire thousands of people.

Since retiring, Kara has been a sought after speaker, broadcaster, event emcee and mentor. In 2017, Kara founded the LEAD Sports Summit for girls, with the mission of providing leadership and empowerment opportunities to female teenage athletes. She has been asked to speak on numerous panels about women's leadership and women in sports. She is pursuing a career in broadcasting, focusing on sports and lifestyle. Kara has covered every major national and international swimming event and continues to build her portfolio. She has been asked to speak on numerous panels about Women in Sports, Women's Leadership and Development and Sports PR and Marketing.

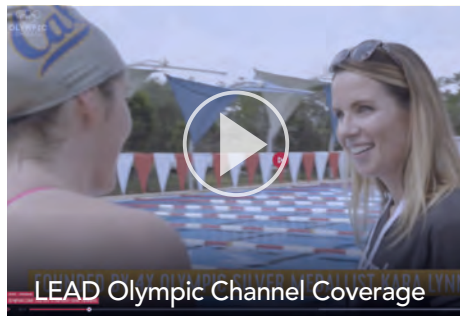

LEAD don't follow.

The LEAD Sports Summit was established in 2017 to connect young female athletes with accomplished women in sports, through an annual Summit.

Our mission at LEAD is to change the lives of young female athletes by teaching, empowering and cultivating an environment for leadership. The LEAD Summit features over 20 different sessions, activities, breakout groups, keynote speeches, outdoor sessions, group workouts and more. All sessions are led by a professional LEAD mentor and Olympian.
